

information

Grants

Grants are a donation, typically given by a government agency, that can increase the capacity of your organization, fund new programs or ideas, enrich the lives of your employees, and more. They can be found locally, at the state level, and at the federal level.

The link below contains a detailed guide to grant writing that includes common elements of grant proposals, general tips, and sample proposals.

Resource

Grants.gov offers a database of federal grants. This database allows you to filter by opportunity status, funding type, category, eligibility, and agency to find relevant grants. You can then apply directly from the site. Check it out >

READ: All about grant writing

READ: Tips for Grantwriting

LISTEN: Grow your grant potential

WATCH: ROI of Grant Writing

Organization Tip

Create Google alerts for specific grants or grant categories. New results for this topic will then be delivered straight to your inbox. This is a great way to stay on top of any grant opportunities that could benefit your nonprofit.

"Try This"

Grant writing can be overwhelming. One way to make the process easier is by cowriting. Cowriting may also make you more likely to be granted the funds as it showcases collaboration.

Sign up to learn about BCNP's next meeting!

Sign up for more info

